During their time at Loyola, students must also attend three of the “Meet the Lawyers” panel discussions held by the Loyola Circle of Advocates. These panel discussions, held once per semester, are two hour events in which leading attorneys and judges from the Chicago legal community are invited to discuss specific areas of advocacy. Past panel discussions have included criminal law, and the federal court system. Attendance is taken at each of these events. The Advocacy Center will confirm that your attendance at three of these events was recorded.
